And Yet They Learned: Education of Jewish Children in Nazi Occupied Areas

Tuesday, 1/16 from 10:30am – Noon at Congregation Beth Shalom, 6800 35th Ave NE, Seattle

From 1933-1945 Jewish children in German ghettos, concentration camps, orphanages, convents and monasteries, and even in forests were secretly educated. This is educational history like you've never seen before. Perhaps even most importantly, we will examine how these answers can be applied to contemporary educational settings

Rick Horwitz, PhD, Executive Director of the Allen Institute for Cell Science on the Latest Advances

Thursday, 1/25 from 10:30am – Noon at Temple De Hirsch Sinai, Bellevue Campus: 3850 156th Ave SE, Bellevue

As humans, our lives begin as a single cell, growing to 50 trillion cells in adulthood. Each of these cells is a microcosm of complex, living machinery. Recent advances have yielded remarkable insights into how many of the individual pieces of cellular machinery function. But understanding how they work together to produce a living cell requires an entirely different approach. Rick Horwitz, a world renowned expert in cell biology and biophysics, will share the approach Paul Allen's Institute in South Lake Union is taking in this cutting edge area of research.
